For me, technology has never been just numbers and codes: I have always seen it as a way to simplify people's lives and create more authentic connections. Despite my degree in Economics and Management, I followed my curiosity, teaching myself how to build digital solutions and experiment with innovation.

Working in IT has given me the opportunity to transform complexity into useful tools, while my experience in event organization has taught me what it means to bring different people together around a common project. Today, my goal is to continue on this path: using digital technology to unleash energy, improve work, and simplify what seems complicated.
